

Dear Pennsylvania Dept. of Transportation,

If ever there was a time for kudos to you, that time is now. You guys (and ladies) are really doing a bang-up job. When I see all of you loafing on the side of the road while unnecessary work goes unfinished, I get a warm fuzzy feeling inside. I'll admit, the choice between working and being a fat lazy piece of shit is a real no-brainer, but you crazy bastards have taken it to a whole new level. To most people, a sign that reads "slow, construction" would lead them to believe that they should slow down because there's work being done. Not in the world where you live. In your world, that sign means that you guys are in your trucks, jerking off by the side of the road. Careful, don't get any on the windshield... Don't worry female workers, I know you're not masturbating; you work very hard. That "slow/stop" sign doesn't just turn itself. I think it would be much more effective and more people would slow down if you were actually standing there barefoot and pregnant. Now that would be a real victory for the feminist movement. After that, bake me a pie.

Back to the lazy douchebag men.

Here are some helpful suggestions you can use when looking for things to do while you're at work:

- ✓ Hold your arms straight out sideways and run around pretending you're an airplane. (airplane noises are optional)
- ✓ See who can shove the most ice cubes up their own ass.
- ✓ Eat asparagus and see how long it takes to make your urine smell bad.
- ✓ Drink the aforementioned urine and pave the fucking roads.

While I'm sure walking around wearing a hard hat is thirsty work on its own; our highways aren't going to pave themselves. Perhaps in the future someone will invent roads that pave themselves, but you'll be long dead by then. That will be a shame too, because who will stand there with their dick in their hand watching it happen? Maybe that same guy will invent a robot to take over that unbearably difficult task. On second thought, we should outsource that job to China - they'll be able to work longer hours because their dicks are smaller and it won't take so much energy to stand there holding it.

Now get back to work, fucko.

*Love,
Bill Scott*
